Compare and contrast the colonization strategies of the Spanish and the French in the Americas.

The Spanish colonization strategy involved military conquest, the establishment of missions, and the extraction of resources, leading to a hierarchical society dominated by Spanish settlers. In contrast, the French adopted a more cooperative approach, focusing on fur trade and forming alliances with Native American tribes, which resulted in a more integrated and less oppressive colonial presence.

Describe the economic systems established by the Spanish in their American colonies and their effects on indigenous populations.

The economic systems established by the Spanish in their American colonies included the encomienda system, where Spanish settlers were granted rights to indigenous labor in exchange for protection and Christianization, and the hacienda system, which involved large estates that relied on indigenous and enslaved labor for agricultural production. These systems resulted in severe exploitation, forced labor, and a dramatic decline in indigenous populations due to overwork, disease, and violence.

Explain the significance of the Columbian Exchange and its impact on both the Old and New Worlds.

The Columbian Exchange refers to the widespread exchange of plants, animals, goods, and diseases between the Americas and Europe following Columbus's voyages in the late 15th century, which had lasting impacts on both regions, including the introduction of new agricultural products and the devastating effects of diseases on indigenous populations.
